Hatch Praises President Bush's Announcement of Immigration Reform Principles

We must protect our borders and be vigilant in the enforcement of our immigration laws. Like President Bush, I oppose blanket amnesty. At the same time, we are a nation of immigrants and must let common sense, fairness and tradition help guide our immigration policy, and extend a welcoming hand to those whose presence will benefit our nation and our economy. Furthermore, having a legal avenue to work in the United States will likely reduce the incentive to illegally cross our borders.

TCP/IP required for the Web Server? - TID2909678 (last modified 21MAY1999)

Is TCP/IP required for the NetWare Web Server? Yes. The HTTP.NLM only communicates with the TCP/IP stack. It is possible, as with intraNetWare's IPX/IP gateway or the InnerWeb Publisher's IWare Connect Lite, to set up an IP to IPX gateway so that the TCP/IP communication from the Web Server is routed over to the IPX network. Then, client's running on the network can access the Web Server by using a special WINSOCK.DLL that communicates over IPX instead of having to have TCP/IP configured.

TCP/IP must be installed on the server before the NetWare Web Server can be installed. For instructions on installing the TCP/IP protocol stack on the NetWare Server, see your NetWare 4.1 documentation.

The client and the server must be able to PING each other before the client will be able to access the NetWare Web Server. If PING doesn't work between the server and client, neither will HTTP.

Characterize the Climate of Mars 01.15.04

A top priority in our exploration of Mars is understanding its present climate, what its climate was like in the distant past, and the causes of climate change over time.

What's the Martian Climate Like Today?

The current Martian climate is regulated by seasonal changes of the carbon dioxide ice caps, the movement of large amounts of dust by the atmosphere and the exchange of water vapor between the surface and the atmosphere. One of the most dynamic weather patterns on Mars is the generation of dust storms that generally occur in the southern spring and summer. These storms can grow to encompass the whole planet. Understanding how these storms develop and grow is one goal of future climatic studies.

Monitoring the planet for this information over one full Martian year (687 Earth days) will help us understand how Mars behaves over its seasonal cycle and guide us toward understanding how the planet changes over millions of years.

Mad cow update: How to limit your risk

Now that mad-cow disease has occurred in the United States, it has raised anew the vulnerability of American herds to this deadly disease and the safety of the food supply. Here's what you need to know to protect yourself.

What is mad-cow disease?

Mad-cow disease is one of several similar fatal brain diseases known as transmissible spongiform encephalopathies, or TSEs. The name is based on their main effect: The infected brain eventually becomes riddled with spongelike holes. In people, the disease is called Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, or CJD; in cows, it's called mad-cow disease; in sheep, it's scrapie; and in deer and elk, chronic wasting disease. All are believed to be caused by a mutant protein, or prion, that can apparently induce normal proteins to mimic its shape. Evidence suggests that the disease can jump from species to species when a diseased animal is eaten. Cooking meat until it's well done will protect against bacteria but not infectious prions

Is it safe to eat U.S. beef?

The extent of the risk of human infection is currently unknown. Until more information is available, individuals need to make a judgement about their risk tolerance, according to the food-safety experts at Consumers Union's Consumer Policy Institute. If eating beef is not very important to you, you

@Media CSS Tags

- Netscape 4.x will generally ignore any media-specific styles, with the exception of media="screen", which is added to <link>. So no print-specific stylesheets will function in Netscape 4.x. Also any stylesheets set to 'all' will be ignored by Netscape 4.x.

@Media CSS Tags

- Internet Explorer 5.5 & 6, Netscape 6 & 7, Opera 7, and Mozilla do a much better job of handling different media types. Still, the safest ones to deal with are 'screen', 'print', and 'all'.
